

Company supports women business leaders

Written by Sunny

Thursday, 23 December 2010 18:55

---

Washington, DC – Wells Fargo & Company (NYSE:WFC) joined Diversity Woman Magazine to uplift and empower women during the Diversity Women's Business Conference held in Washington, DC, recently. Over two days, women in various industries ranging from executives, educators, entrepreneurs and innovators, came together to discuss strategies and solutions for demonstrating leadership in the modern workplace. Wells Fargo was also a supporter of the Mosaic Women Awards Luncheon and joined panelists during breakout sessions and workshops which addressed executive leadership and personal development.

Founded five years ago by Sheila Robinson, the Diversity Women's Business Conference continues to grow as a professional networking force for diverse women. "We have the opportunity to develop and build lasting relationships that can and will bridge the leadership gaps," said Robinson in regards to working alongside Wells Fargo & Company to host the Diversity Women's Business Conference.

Diversity Woman Magazine recognized four amazing women for their visions and leadership, and for their cultural and worldly influence. Among the honorees, Dr. Maya Angelou received the Legend Award for her many accomplishments as a poet, educator and writer and her perpetual commitment to inspire women across the globe. Other winners included author and commentator Dr. Julianne Malveaux, and renowned inspirational speaker Consuelo Castillo Kickbusch. Also, Edie Fraser, managing director and Chair of the Diversity Practice at Diversified Search Ray & Berndston, was recognized during the conference.