

Web resources available for families in tough times

Written by

Wednesday, 18 February 2009 17:51

The current economic crisis has taken a toll on many Minnesota families. University of Minnesota Extension has created the Families in Tough Times website (www.extension.umn.edu/family) to help families tackle the “tough times” of today and tomorrow.

Featured on this site are publications, trainings, news releases and other resources that help families who are currently experiencing, avoiding or recovering from tough times. Professionals who work with families will find resources on personal financial management, change management and customized trainings to better assist the families they work with.

New materials are added and featured on the website on a weekly basis. Visit www.extension.umn.edu/family for more information.