

Freedom School keeps kids learning throughout summer

Written by Sheila Regan, TC Daily Planet
Friday, 17 August 2012 13:46

When I say Freedom, you say School!"

"Freedom!"

"School!"

"Freedom!"

"School!"

The 118 kids gathered in the atrium at the Saint Paul Neighborhood Freedom School enthusiastically call back to Emmanuel Donaby, who, microphone in hand, leads a good half hour of cheering, chanting, singing and dancing. There's no end to the number of chants the kids know, even after just a week of attending a week of camp. They're encouraged by the 14 college-aged interns and 13 high school junior Interns. "G-o-o-d-M-o-r-n-i-n-g! Good Morning," they chant. After a while, Mahmoud

El-Kati treats them to a story by about a monkey and a wildcat, and teaches them a few Swahili words.

Freedom School keeps kids learning throughout summer

Written by Sheila Regan, TC Daily Planet
Friday, 17 August 2012 13:46

